FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The Court of Military Appeals BY CHIEF JUDGE ROBERT E. QUINN*

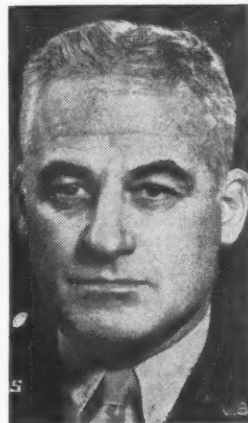

THE United States Court of Military Appeals represents an introduction of civilian principles and control into the military system of jurisprudence. It is one of the most important reforms brought about by the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which overhauled rather thoroughly the military court-martial system. The Court's responsibilities and its performance to date indicate that the original fears of some traditional militarists that the Court would interfere with purely military problems were unwarranted.

The establishment of a civilian court to review court-martial convictions is not a new idea. Such a tribunal was proposed at the end of the first World War, when there was considerable civilian concern about the military criminal system. The proposal was, however, rejected, and it took another World War and more civilian—and Congressional—dissatisfaction with the system to bring the Court to life. The Court was not created without considerable conflict. Many military witnesses before the Armed Services Committees of the Congress advocated that supreme reviewing authority be vested in a council of military officers. On the other hand, of course, were the extreme proponents of civilian control who desired to have a civilian court review all court-martial convictions, with power to consider both questions of law and fact. The final result was something of a compromise. The civilian tribunal was created, but its jurisdiction was limited. An accused can petition for review from a board of review decision if the sentence, as finally approved, extends to a bad conduct discharge or confinement for one year or more. The Court has discretion to grant these petitions on "good cause shown." This type of review accounts—as might be expected—for the greatest portion of the Court's work. The Judge Advocate General of any of the services—and the General Counsel of the Treasury Department, acting for the Coast Guard in peacetime—can certify to the Court any decision of a board of review. The Court is required by law to review any such case. Finally, any case involving a sentence of death or which affects a flag or general officer must be reviewed. The Court's reviewing power is limited to

Gen. Twining Named Next Air Force C/S

General Nathan Farragut Twining, USAF, was nominated by President Eisenhower on 7 May, for appointment as Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force, to succeed General Hoyt S. Vandenberg.

Gen. Twining

Shortly before the nomination went to the Senate, the Defense Department disclosed that General Vandenberg had requested retirement from active duty on 30 June, following completion of his second term as Chief of Staff. The request was accepted "with reluctance" by Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott.

The Air Secretary praised General Vandenberg for his "great contribution to our Nation's security." He said, "Under your leadership and by reason of your unwavering support, the Strategic Air Command has become the most powerful and effective military force ever assembled in the interest of peace."

AF Takes Big Share of New Cut in Budget

The new Eisenhower Defense Budget, replacing the Truman Budget estimates sent up in January, arrived at the House Appropriations Committee this week. Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Mass.) announced that they totaled $36 billion as against the original estimates of $41.2 billion—a cut of more than 10 per cent.

The major portion of the reduction comes out of the funds for the building up of the Air Force to its 143-wing ob-

SecDef May Endorse Tying C-O-L To Pay

Hopes for a military pay raise have been revived at the Pentagon. There's support also on Capitol Hill.

A proposal to tie military pay to the cost-of-living index (exactly two years old this week) reportedly is gaining surprising favor with Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

As head of General Motors, he helped pioneer the "escalator clause" contract for civilian industry.

Reconsideration of a military pay boost comes in the wake of President Eisenhower's publicly expressed interest in the problem of attracting and retaining outstanding personnel for the Armed Services. (THE JOURNAL, 2 May.)

The military cost-of-living pay plan, proposed in legislation sponsored by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.) and first described in detail in the 12 May 1951 issue of THE JOURNAL, is being analyzed by Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah, manpower and personnel chief, and his staff aides. Whether it has also been given fiscal study is not certain.

Representative Van Zandt, a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a captain in the Naval Reserve, was enthusiastic when apprised of the new developments at the Pentagon.

Congressman Van Zandt this session reintroduced the legislation calling for an annual review of military pay in relationship to the cost of living.

This measure is H.R. 1437, dated 9 Jan. The Defense Department has been asked to state its views on the measure, and the Congressman indicated to THE JOURNAL that he anticipates a favorable reaction.

"We have always waited too long in the past to adjust military pay to the cost-of-living," Captain Van Zandt declared. "And usually, even after the adjustment has been made it has not kept pace with the increased living costs."

Mr. Van Zandt said that something must be done "to alleviate the inequities which develop as a result."

He contends that his bill is the answer. Defense Department spokesmen, queried officially, declined to confirm the report that Mr. Wilson may agree to a request by the Pentagon to Congress for a military pay adjustment. But THE JOURNAL was told authoritatively that the matter is again under consideration.

Consequently, chances for a pay boost took life. They had been thought dead following Mr. Wilson's 20 March press conference during which he curtly dismissed the proposal for an 8 per cent hike in base pay, which previously had received strong support from former Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg, Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett and President Harry S.

Air Active; Navy Hits Wonsan Again

With the exception of one strong Communist thrust northeast of Panmunjom, ground action along the 155-mile Korea front was at a virtual standstill this week as truce negotiators continued discussions.

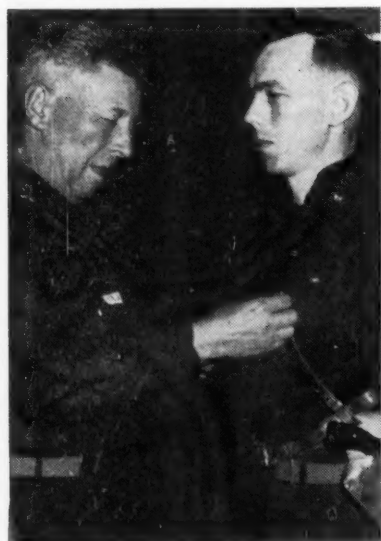

Not even on May Day did an expected Red offensive develop. But in the other phases of warfare, action was stepped-up somewhat. There were several engagements reported between Sabre jets and MiG's, and Allied bombers continued raids on supply and communications centers in North Korea. The much battered port of Wonsan received another "terrific" pasting this week from carrier planes and ship fire.

Amid this general let-down in activities, the Air Force quietly announced the retirement of an aging veteran of the war... the 9-year-old F-80 Shooting Star, the first jet fighter produced by the United States. Once the most powerful attack plane in the Korean skies, the Shooting Star has been eclipsed by new, faster and more rugged jets. The last unit to fly the graceful ships was the Eighth Fighter Wing, which now has been converted to F-86 Sabre jet fighter-bombers. The oldest jet model now left in Korea is the F-84 Thunderjet.

Earlier in the week, 50 Sabre jets converted into dive-bombers hurled destruction at the radio station and military headquarters at Pyongyang, the North Korean capital. The station went off the air briefly but resumed operation after the raid.

Candian and British troops beat back a determined Communist attack between Little Gibraltar and The Hook as wave after wave of howling Chinese crossed over No Man's Land and into Allied trenches. The bitter battle raged furiously for four hours before the enemy retreated with heavy casualties. One officer reported that the Chinese were seen throwing their own dead out of trenches when the bodies got in the way.

The battleship New Jersey and three other warships... the cruiser Bremerton and the destroyers Twining and Colohan, blasted Wonsan, crumbling gun positions and touching off tremendous explosions. Bombs and rockets were rained on the important east coast port by dive-bombers and fighter-bombers from Task Force 77. Earlier in the week, the Navy announced that the destroyers Owen and Masox were hit by shore batteries at Wonsan, but the damage was described as "superficial."

New Budget Cuts

jective. Original Truman estimates gave the Air Force $16.7 billions in obligational authority; the new estimates allow only $11.6 billion.

The Navy takes a cut of nearly two billion from its original estimate of $11.3 to $9.6 billion.

The Army appears to have an increase, the old estimates having permitted only $12 billion while the new admits $13.6.

It must be remembered, however, that these reduced estimates still have to run the gamut of two appropriation committees and two houses of Congress. Representative John Taber (R-NY) chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, has long been a critic of Defense expenditures, while Senator Taft, Republican leader in the Senate, has made known in no uncertain terms his dissatisfaction with what he considers the small cut in military expenditures.

The estimates were made public in a statement issued by Mr. Wigglesworth instead of by the usual release of a detailed statement from the budget bureau. In it, he repeated the complaint that the new administration is bound by the contract obligations of the prior administration, leaving the implication that, if it were possible, some current contracts would be abrogated. In his statement Mr. Wigglesworth said:

"The revised estimates have been made in the light of estimated unexpended funds as of 30 June 1953, totaling about 63 billion dollars, of which 17 billion will be in the Department of the Army; 17 billion in the Department of the Navy, and 29 billion in the Department of the Air Force.

"On the basis of revised figures this would mean that about 99 billion dollars would be available for expenditure by the Department of Defense during the next fiscal year, of which about 30.6 billion dollars would be available for the Army; about 26.6 billion for the Navy, and about 40.5 billion for the Air Force, with something over a billion for the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

"Expenditures during the current year, based on figures for the first 9 months, are estimated at approximately 43 billion dollars as compared with 43.4 billion dollars in the Truman Budget submission. A substantial reduction in expenditure is hoped for in the fiscal year 1954 as compared with the 43.2 billion dollars now estimated and the 45.5 (Please turn to Page 1111)

White to be Vice Chief

The President, at the same time that he sent General Twining's appointment to the Senate, also nominated Lt. Gen. Thomas Dresser White, USAF, for appointment as Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force with the rank of general. The assignment currently is held by General Twining.

In accepting General Vandenberg's retirement request, Secretary Talbott wrote as follows:

6 May 1953

Dear General Vandenberg:

I have your letter requesting retirement from active duty. We have discussed the circumstances that prompt your action, and with reluctance I acquiesce in your request. I cannot do so, however, without a word about your great service to the Nation.

You played a leading part as an Air Force commander in World War II and more recently, as Chief of Staff of the Air Force you have had the grave responsibility of directing the Air Force through a build-up of its strength, while guiding and supporting it at the same time in the war in Korea.

Under your leadership and by reason of your unwavering support, the Strategic Air Command has become the most powerful and effective military force ever assembled in the interest of peace. Your decision in the early years of your leadership of the Air Force to concentrate its relatively meager resources within this command was a wise and far-sighted action.

I have been impressed by the high order of professional and technical competence that I have found in the Air Force and by the manner in which your commanders have adjusted themselves to the influence of new weapons upon strategy and tactics. They are a credit to your leadership.

You have made a great contribution to our Nation's security. Your country is in your debt. I am sure I speak for all the men and women of the Air Force in expressing deep regret at your retirement from active service.

Sincerely,

Marine Corps Plans Promotion Change; No Statutory Retirements In Sight

The Marine Corps has requested authority to make a major change in its present promotion policy, THE JOURNAL learned this week.

Although the expected policy shift has not been announced—due to the practice at HQMC not to divulge plans which require the sanction of higher authority—it was learned that the Corps has asked approval to return to the permanent provisions of the Officer Personnel Act for future promotions of colonels and general officers.

At present, all Marine officers are being selected for temporary promotion only, under the terms of the Temporary Promotion Act of 1941. No change has been asked for officers in the lower grades.

Attrition Involved

The main reason reportedly advanced by Headquarters for the change is that the 1941 Act has served its purpose insofar as promotions in the higher ranks are concerned. However, observers believe that three other factors have entered the picture. These are:

1—The absence of permanent (statutory) boards has slowed down attrition under the two-times-and-out law, since no officers are considered passed over by the temporary boards.

2—The Van Zandt amendment, which prevents officers from retiring except for reasons of age, physical disability and hardship, curtails attrition which might be achieved through early retirements.

3—The latter situation is further complicated by the fact that no Marine generals will reach statutory age during the next 47 months.

In the past, personnel officials have stated that attrition must be maintained by at least 10 per cent in the higher ranks in order to insure a steady flow of promotions. Otherwise, stagnation results in the top ranks and promotions are stalled in the lower grades.

No Serious Problems

Queried about present attrition rates, Marine Headquarters said "No serious problems in connection with promotion to the grades of general officer have arisen at any time." It is known, however, that one method of increasing attrition is to return promotions of generals and colonels to the OPA, thereby assuring selection failures. Another method would be to lower the quota of the annual Marine Corps retention boards which select general officers for continued service after they have completed 35 years' service and five years in the grade of permanent major general.

With regard to present attrition through selection failures, observers note that no permanent Marine generals and only 11 colonels now on the active list have been passed over twice, and that only six of this group (including one temporary brigadier general) are subject to retirement this fiscal year. The others will be forced to retire only after they have completed 30 years' service.

Use of Attrition Boards

The second method—use of forced attrition through retention boards—has not been employed effectively for attrition purposes thus far by the Marine Corps. Only two retention boards have met since the OPA became law. The first of these selected all of the eligible officers for retention, and the second (which met only last March) is reported to have taken similar action, although no official announcement has been made.

With the present slow-down in attrition, it is believed by some observers that the next retention board, which will meet in fiscal '54, may be directed to make fewer selections. Six top generals, including those previously selected for retention, will be eligible for consideration by next year's board unless they are retired for some other reason before the board meets.

Statutory Retirements

It is possible, however, that the situation would be alleviated if the Van Zandt amendment is not reenacted by the Congress. Removal of the amendment would give these officers an opportunity to retire voluntarily, thereby restoring the attrition rate to normalcy.

The new Register of Commissioned Officers shows that no member of this group will reach statutory retirement age before becoming eligible for consideration by the retention board. There are no general officers, in fact, who will reach the statutory age (62) during the remainder of the current calendar year, or during calendar 1954.

Only four officers (Lt. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, and Major Generals John T. Selden, John T. Walker and O. P. Smith) will reach statutory retirement age in 1955.

Six others (Lieutenant Generals Franklin A. Hart and Gerald C. Thomas, and Major Generals Alfred H. Noble, William J. Whaling, Henry D. Wiscott and Walter W. Wensinger) will reach statutory age in 1956.

Next Board For BG's

Another factor believed to be involved in the problem is that six officers are now serving in the rank of brigadier general as the result of temporary selection under the 1941 Act. These officers (together with a seventh who has been selected but not yet promoted) will have to be considered again by the next statutory board which meets to name colonels for promotion to BG. Meanwhile, an eighth officer in this category will be retired next month.

Although promotion plans for fiscal 1954 have not yet been firmed up, indications are that the next board may be permitted to select up to 12 officers for promotion to one-star rank. If the number is set at that level, the board could, if it wished, select all of those previously selected under the temporary act, and still promote five others. On the other hand, it could pass over all seven, or else select a smaller number.

Whatever the outcome of this board, however, observers note that the attrition rate will control actual promotions, since promotions are made only as vacancies are created.

It is expected that the plan to return to the OPA for promotions to top Marine ranks will not be opposed, and that it will be placed into effect soon after 1 July.

Military Justice

questions of law in all cases.

The Court is attached to the Department of Defense for administrative purposes only. Physically, it is located in the United States Court of Military Appeals Building at 5th and E Streets, N. W., Washington, D. C. The law provides that there shall be three Judges on the Court, who shall serve for 15-year terms. The first three appointees are, however, restricted to staggered terms of 15, 10 and 5 years. The two other Judges on the Court besides myself are Judge George W. Latimer, who previously served as a Justice of the Utah Supreme Court and, in the military, as a Colonel in the Field Artillery and General Staff Corps of the Army of the United States and the National Guard, and Judge Paul W. Brosman, who was formerly Dean of the Tulane Law School and had considerable military experience as an Air Force Judge Advocate.

As of January 1, 1953, a total of 2,072 cases were docketed with the Court since the first one which was filed on July 8, 1951, with final action taken on 1,650 of them. Of the 2,072 cases filed, 1,970 were Petitions by the accused, 107 were on Certificate from one of The Judge Advocates General, and 11 were cases in which the death penalty had been imposed. In addition, one case invokes the jurisdiction of the Court over cases involving general or flag officers. This is the celebrated Major General Robert W. Grow case, now pending before the Court. Approximately 15 per cent of the Petitions filed have been granted, with the Court rendering 178 written opinions. Enlisted men were involved in 169; officers in 7; and, civilians subject to the Code, in the remaining 2. The result in 81 of the cases decided was distinctively to the advantage of the accused, the decisions varying from dismissal of the charges to directions that a Board of Review correct a sentence error.

These figures indicate that the Court's burden is at least one of the heaviest of the appellate courts in the country, and accurately reflect the fact that the Court is a very busy organization. That the Court may be even busier in the future, when the facts about its operations are widely disseminated both within and without the services, is indicated by the fact that at present only about 10 per cent of the cases decided by the boards of review are being brought to the Court on Petition by the accused. Of course, it must be recognized that in many of these cases the accused may feel that he has no meritorious argument for further review. Or, the sentence may have been remitted or served, so that the accused is satisfied with the result and has no desire to go higher on the appellate ladder.

The Code requires that each of the Armed Forces provide defense counsel to brief and argue an accused's case before the Court. The accused also has the right, at his own expense, to have his case presented by civilian counsel. To date, some 350 civilian lawyers have been admitted to practice before the Court, and a substantial number have participated in cases.

The Court has already passed on a wide variety of legal issues arising under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The cases have involved questions ranging from those purely procedural to extremely complicated substantive and jurisdictional issues. It may safely be said that the most satisfactory portion of the Court's work concerns those questions—arising particularly in the field of evidence—where it can reach a decision relatively free from the confining bounds of precedent. The Court must—and we believe it does—weigh carefully in these situations the peculiarities necessarily incidental to the military community before importing into the scheme of military justice a rule now existing in civilian criminal law. The Court hopes that its opinions will be subjected to critical analysis by lawyers and military and legal writers both in and out of the service. Constructive comments by those interested in the future course of military justice cannot but be helpful to the Judges who are charged with primary responsibility for charting that course.

One branch of the Court's work which should certainly be mentioned is that involving reports to the Congress embodying recommendations for amendments to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Annually, the Court is required to join with the Judge Advocates General in submitting a full report on the operation of the Code. One such report has already been submitted, and work is now going forward on the second report. The Court has appointed a Committee of interested and experienced civilian lawyers, representative of all viewpoints, to assist it in formulating positive recommendations concerning the most controversial aspects of court-martial system.

The Court feels that it has a dual responsibility in relation to military justice. First is that involved in insuring that justice is done in each individual case coming before the Court. Second is the task it must perform in establishing a sound and lasting framework for the day-to-day operation of the Code. This latter branch of the Court's work requires that our opinions must have importance far beyond the fate of the individual case. It also requires that decisions must sometimes be based on what may, at first blush, appear to be mere technicalities. It is important to remember that procedural technicalities required by an Act of Congress may well embody a sound reason of law which, over the centuries, has been deemed necessary to insure the desired end result of justice—conviction for the guilty; freedom for the innocent.

The Court shall continue in its efforts to establish law that enables the military justice system to operate efficiently and fairly. We do not—and shall not—accept the argument of some that military discipline and true justice are conflicting concepts. While there may be disagreement both within and without the Court as to the desirability or legality of individual rules of law, there should be no disagreement with the fundamental concept that each and every one of us concerned with the system should make every effort to improve it.

VR-32 Has New C.O.

Comdr. Joseph E. Hart, USN, is the new C.O. of Air Transport Squadron 32, San Diego, succeeding Comdr. C. B. Cottingham who has been assigned to the staff of the Chief of Naval Air Technical Training, Memphis, Tenn.

Gen. Doolittle Is Chairman

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, retired Air Force General who led the famous raid on Tokyo during WW II, has accepted chairmanship of the United Defense Fund which is seeking to raise $20,225,000 to finance the USO and five other member agencies during the coming year.

The UDF is a federation of six national health, welfare and recreation agencies which provides defense-related services. In addition to the USO, other organizations that form the federation are the American Relief for Korea, United Communist Defense Services, American Social Hygiene Association, National Recreation Association and United Seamen's Service.

Funds for continuation of these services during 1953 will be sought chiefly through Community Chests and other united community campaigns throughout the country. General Doolittle, vice-president and a director of Shell Oil Company, commanded the 12th, 15th and 8th Air Forces during the last war. His appointment as chairman of the UDF was announced by Edward L. Ryerson, chairman of the boards of Inland Steel Company and UDF.

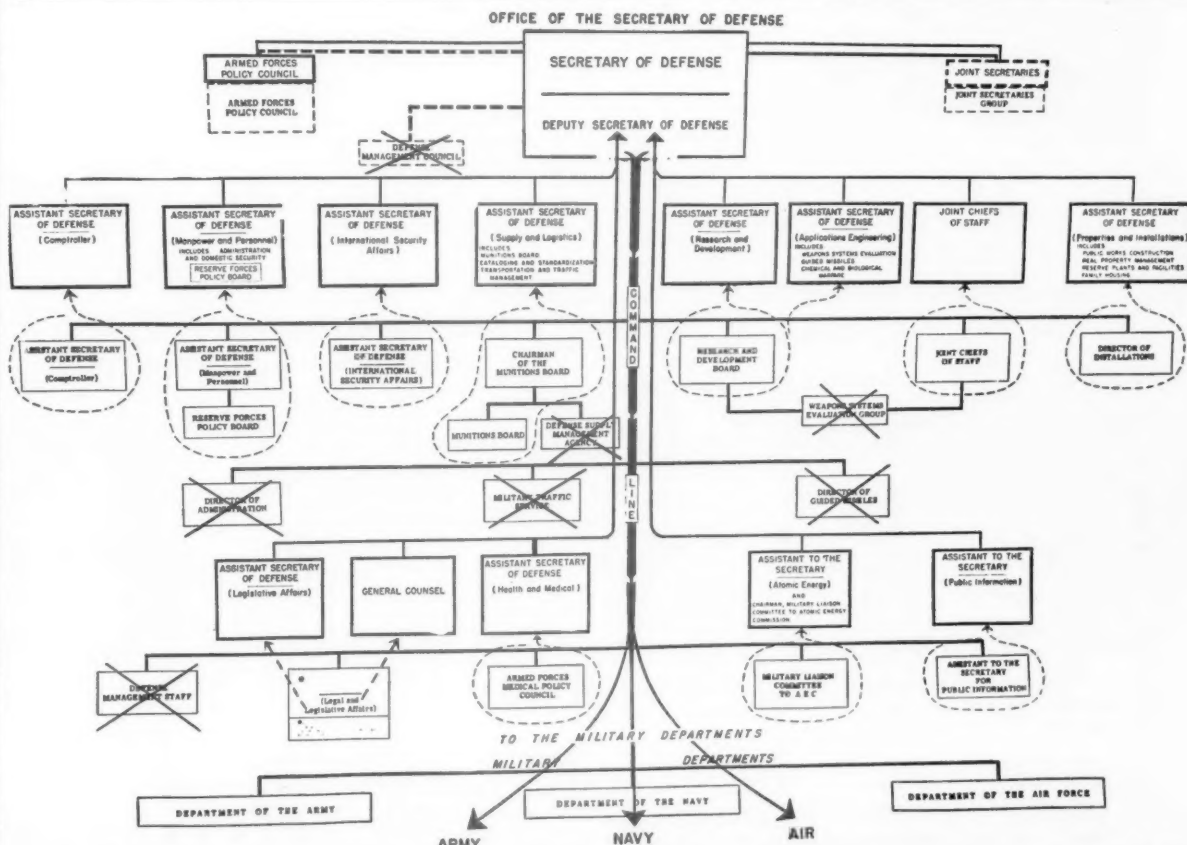

ConAC Studies Justice Code

Approximately 100 Air Force Staff Judge Advocates from eastern bases met at Mitchell Air Force Base, N. Y., 6-7 May to study and evaluate progress of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, Continental Air Command has announced.

Following welcoming by Maj Gen. William E. Hall, ConAC's Vice Commander, the conferees were addressed by Maj. Gen. Reginald C. Harmon, USAF Judge Advocate General, and Brig. Gen. Albert M. Kuhfeld, his assistant. The conference was held under the direction of Col. Francis W. Schweikhardt, ConAC Staff Judge Advocate.

Similar Air Force Staff Judge Advocate conferences are scheduled to be held at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex., 14-15 May and at Hamilton AFB, San Rafael, Calif., 18-19 May.

Def. Asks Congress To Increase Cols. In MSC

The Department of Defense this week asked Congress to increase from two to eight per cent the number of colonels permitted in the Medical Service Corps of the Army. Enactment of such a law would permit an increase in MSC colonels from the present 18 to a maximum of 70.

The covering letter points out that the present two per cent limitation is in contrast to the eight per cent authorized all other male corps in the Regular Army.

Recalling that the Army-Navy Medical Services Corps Act was approved in 1947 the letter states that at that time it was "the opinion of The Surgeon General that such per centum (2%) in the grade of colonel was proper, based on the number of positions for colonel, in the then-existing Tables of Distribution and Tables of Organization and Equipment used in the Medical Department."

"The entire concept, however, of utilization of Medical Service Corps officers has undergone a complete revision since that date. At present, those officers are filling positions of responsibility which were not envisioned at the time of enactment of the Army-Navy Medical Services Corps Act of 1947. For example, the Surgeon General has intensively studied and field-tested improved administrative and organizational procedures in General Hospitals. Results of those studies indicate that efficiency and economy of operations will be enhanced by the assignment of colonels in certain key management and administrative positions."

The covering letter indicates many of the fields in which the training of the officers is of paramount value, and then states that "in many of these fields the educational requirements range up through the Doctor of Philosophy degree."

"The Surgeon General has, for some time, been in the process of preparing career guidance patterns for Medical Department officers. Thorough study of these career guidance patterns and of functions now being performed by Medical Service officers reveals that there are approximately 52 types of positions which should eventually be occupied by officers in the grade of colonel."

"Vacancies which would normally exist in the grade of colonel in the Medical Service Corps if 8% were authorized instead of 2% could," the Department says, "then be utilized by the Secretary of the Army, in his discretion, to increase the number of officers authorized in the grades of captain, major, or lieutenant colonel; thus affording officers of the MSC the same relative opportunities for promotion in lower grades, as well as ultimately to the grade of colonel, as is now enjoyed by their fellow officers on the various other promotion lists."

On towers 20 to 35 miles apart, "dishes" like this direct microwaves in a line—relay them at the speed of light.

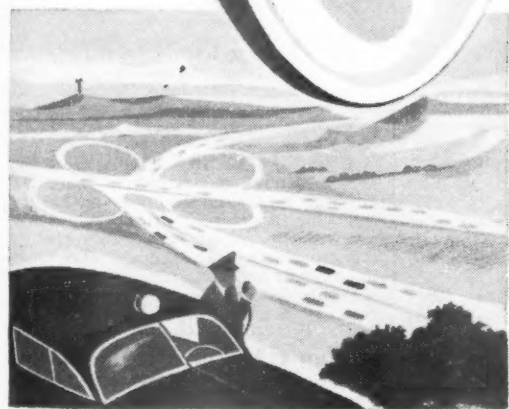

Out of this "dish" come service and safety

Like a pole line in the sky, the RCA microwave system gives industry, business, transportation and our police forces a new, more efficient means of communication.

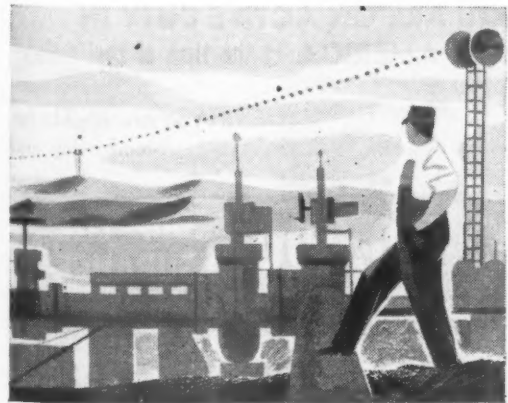

Needing no wires, economical to install and maintain, an RCA microwave system is "weatherproof." Wind and rain almost never affect its performance while, obviously, ice and sleet won't form on a radio beam to put it out of action.

Useful wherever man must communicate with man, or control industrial operations, the increased efficiency of microwave is another example of RCA leadership in research and engineering. Such leadership gives you better value in any product or service of RCA and RCA Victor.

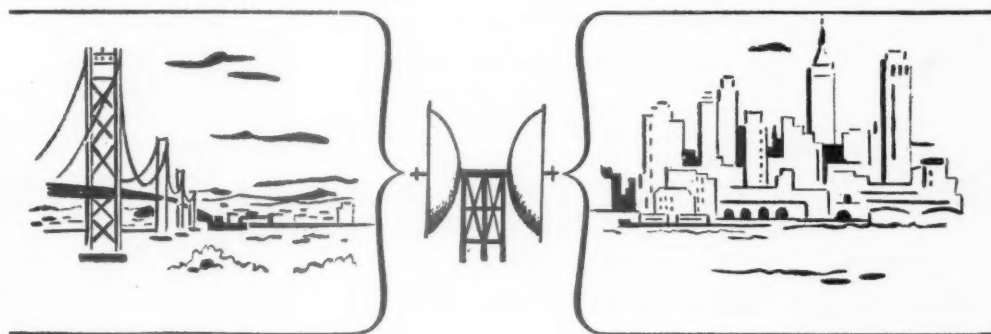

On new super-highways, RCA microwave and RCA mobile radio help control traffic flow, help police trap lawbreakers—just as conservation officials use it to catch poachers, to warn against the danger of fire and flood.

RCA microwave helps oil companies move oil through pipelines and booster stations, gives power companies better control of current; is used in mining, lumbering, and by the fishing industry.

Retain 84 "Holloway" Officers As Regulars

The Navy has announced the selection of 84 Holloway Plan graduates, both Line and Staff Corps officers, for retention as permanent officers in the Regular Navy. All are members of the first graduating class, commissioned in 1950.

The number of those selected was one less than the number who had applied. THE JOURNAL previously reported (18 Apr.) that only 85 of the first 800 Holloway graduates had signified their desire to be retained as permanent officers.

It was noted at that time that the break-down in one of the Plan's major objectives is expected to be called to the attention of the Defense Secretary as a striking example of the manner in which deteriorating benefits are hampering the Armed Services in their efforts to obtain and hold career personnel.

The Bureau of Naval Personnel, at about the same time it released the names of those selected for retention as career officers, pointed up the continuing need for such applications from other Holloway graduates. An article in the current issue of All Hands, official publication of the Bureau, outlines the scope of the Holloway Plan and the career opportunities which it affords.

Those officers of the 1950 class who were selected for retention in the Regular Navy are:

Rawlins-Shanahan Bill

The so-called Rawlins-Shanahan bill (S. 1063) which has now been amended to direct the Secretary of the Navy to appoint a board to review the records of all officers who failed to be advanced between 30 June 1942 and 7 Aug. 1947, was called up this week by the Senate but was passed over on the objection of Senator Albert Gore (D-Tenn.).

Senator Gore said his objection was made "by request" of a Senator who was not present in the Chamber when the bill came up.

Meanwhile, it was noted that Rear Adm. Ira H. Nunn, Judge Advocate General of the Navy, has advised the Senate Armed Services Committee that the Navy "is firmly of the opinion that these two officers should not now be promoted on the retired list."

Advertisers in the Army Navy Air Force Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.

Add to USMC Air-Ground TF

A company of amphibian tractors (LVT's), and a platoon of amphibious personnel carriers (DUWKs) soon will be added to units making up the 1st Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force at Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii.

The amphibious units will be assigned to the Task Force from the Third Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Brig. Gen. James P. Riseley, Commanding General of the Provisional force, said the new equipment and operating personnel will be permanently assigned to his command for use in amphibious landings and other training maneuvers in the Hawaiian area.

Currently, the Third Battalion Landing Team of the Task Force is scheduled to conduct amphibious maneuvers on the island of Maui next month. Air cover for the operation will be supplied by Col. Edwin C. Pennebaker's Marine Air Group 13.

To Command 1st MarDiv

Maj. Gen. Randolph McCall Pate has been ordered to Korea to relieve Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, as Commanding General of the 1st Marine Division.

Marine Headquarters announced this week that General Pate will be relieved as Commanding General of the 2d Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C., by Maj. Gen. George F. Good, Jr., who is currently serving as Marine Corps Representative in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Maj. Gen. Pate

Maj. Gen. James A. Stuart, Deputy Commander of the Marine Barracks, Camp Pendleton, Calif., has been ordered to Washington to relieve General Good.

No new assignment was announced for General Pollock.

VMA-232 Breaks Record

Marine Attack Squadron 332, commanded by Lt. Col. John Berterling, set two records recently while engaged in carrier operations aboard the USS Salt Lake.

A unit of the Third Marine Air Wing, MCAS, Miami, the squadron made 201 landings its second day out and 263 the following day to break the previous record. Another record was established by the group when 119 landings were made in one hour and forty minutes.

Eighty per cent of the squadron's officers are Reserve pilots.

New C.O. for 6th Marines

Col. Charles M. Nees, former Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, of the 2d Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C., has assumed command of the 6th Marines. He succeeded Col. Ormond R. Simpson, who goes to the Division General Staff.

List AF Promotions To 3 Temp. Ranks

The Air Force released yesterday, 8 May, the names of approximately 175 officers promoted to temporary colonel, 299 advanced to lieutenant colonel and about 336 promoted to major.

The names of all those promoted are published in this issue of THE JOURNAL.

The next group of Air Force temporary promotions from among those selected last month will be announced on or about 1 June.

The remaining officers will be advanced early in the new fiscal year, according to present plans.

The 4 April issue of THE JOURNAL reported about 5600 promotions to temporary captain. All those selected for this rank were promoted simultaneously.

That issue also listed the first promotions to major and the names of all captains selected for temporary promotion. There were about 1700 promotions to major out of a total of about 2700 selected for that rank.

The issue of 15 April listed about 178 promotions to colonel and 382 selections to that rank, approximately 350 promotions to lieutenant colonel and 700 selections to that rank and 375 promotions to major.

This means that all together, the Air Force named about 9910 officers for temporary promotion to captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

What's New at AiResearch

Variable Area Nozzle only inches in diameter—applies principles formerly limited to giant steam and water turbines 12 feet in diameter. Another example of the ability of AiResearch to meet unusual power requirements with a small package.

First production air turbine motor with variable area nozzle!

During the past few years, AiResearch scientists have pioneered a whole new power technology in the development and operation of small air and gas turbine motors.

An example is this 52HP air turbine motor, shown above. Now in production for leading turbine propelled aircraft, this motor is one of 23 basic pneumatic power machines developed and manufactured by AiResearch.

This motor incorporates a variable area nozzle, first developed by AiResearch.

Acting automatically, the nozzle precisely adjusts turbine torque to power requirements and greatly reduces the air consumption necessary with ordinary throttling controls.

The air turbine motor drives hydraulic pumps and constant-speed DC generators and alternators, formerly driven by the main engine. Its four accessory pads permit remote location of accessory functions, thus eliminating service operations in the engine nacelle.

"To fail to continue vigorously to strengthen our military forces would be to risk wasting all our efforts for the past five years in defense of our liberties."—PRESIDENT EISENHOWER.

Armed Forces Day and our Shifting Goals.

As the citizenry pays honor to its Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard on next Saturday, 16 May, the question may well arise as to the future of its armed defense in these times of transition.

The public is confident, from the high caliber of civilian executives placed at the top levels of the Department of Defense, that the procurement for and maintenance of the Armed Forces will be most efficiently administered and that there will be more defense for each dollar spent. The reorganization of the Department and the greater authority given the Secretary is a first, positive step in that direction.

The citizens may, however, be disturbed over the shift in goals. It has been firmly announced that the time-goal has been abandoned. The Joint Chiefs of Staff had determined that the "general period of 1954" would be the "most dangerous for the Security of the United States." The build-up of the respective Services and their production schedules were based on attaining the required strength by that time with continued maintenance at that level until international tension subsided. This time-goal is now definitely rejected.

There had also been established approved strength-goals as: 21 Army divisions, three Marine divisions, a Navy of 408 combat ships with air support, and an Air Force of 143 wings. Whether these strength-goals have been abandoned also or just set aside has not been publicly made known. No mention of them one way or the other has yet been made. It is nevertheless apparent that the sights have been lowered. The nation has been assured that the savings to be made in the Defense budget will not reduce the effective military strength, but no one has said that there is any intention ever to attain our strength-goals. In fact, the most optimistic outlook is that increased efficiency may permit maintenance of our present part-way effectiveness in spite of a reduction in manpower and production.

The new goal is described as "a long-term program calling for a steady and adequate flow of men and materials." The danger is that time-goals and strength-goals may be completely replaced by budgetary-goals. The nation will get the best defense for its money—but will that be defense enough?

These are facts the citizens may well ponder as they pay tribute to the devoted men and women of the Services on Armed Forces Day.

Air Force Leadership. The gratitude and best wishes of the nation go with General Hoyt S. Vandenberg in his forthcoming retirement as Chief of Staff of the Air Force. His brilliant record in air warfare in World War II, from North Africa to the 9th Air Force in France, was climaxed by more than five years as Chief of Staff—an arduous and trying five years in which, by constant and conscientious struggle, he won for his Service the highest recognition both within the military establishment and in the public eye.

Named as his successor is General Nathan F. Twining who has been vice chief for three years. He is thus in a position to know thoroughly what has been going on, what to expect in the future and how best to cope with it. General Twining's World War II service was in the South Pacific, where he was first Chief of Staff of the Army Forces and later commanded the 13th Air Force. In 1943 Admiral W. F. Halsey placed General

Care of Service Families

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Why do the representatives of organized medicine continually complain that doctors in the Services may be called upon to treat the ills of the wives and children of soldiers as well as the soldiers themselves? Can it be that they feel that the families of servicemen are not deserving of medical care, or is it that they want to drive this business to private physicians?

It is hard to believe that they would want to deprive wives and children of medical attention and it is likewise hard to believe that they would want to force them on the already overworked local doctors. A medical officer on a military post can efficiently handle many more patients than private doctors because he can dictate the hours and conditions under which he can see patients and because he has better facilities and better help.

I find it hard to believe that medical organizations are interested only in increasing fees for private practitioners. Yet why else would they be opposing dependent care?

SERVICE WIFE

Why Stay?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I note that President Eisenhower has now asked that the Department of Defense make a study of those matters which may influence officers against acceptance of permanent commissions in the Armed Services. In the same issue you report a speech by Deputy Secretary Keys in which he states that there are few competent or efficient officers in the Department of Defense.

Is there not a connection here? Is it not possible that there are many young Reserve Officers on temporary duty who do not wish to remain permanently because they fear to be stigmatized in this manner? There are many phases to military life that might attract many of us to stay in, but there is always the danger that we may be singled out by politicians or Congressional Committees as scapegoats. Then all the good work we may have done will be forgotten and all that will remain for ourselves and our families will be the publicity of having been connected with a project condemned as inefficient and incompetent. In civilian life nothing that we might do would so condemn us in the public eye. Why take the risk?

CAPTAIN

Air Force Warrant Officers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have come to the conclusion, that after being an Air Force warrant officer for exactly eleven years, I am ready to give up and my reason is in the present system used in selecting for promotion.

My specialty code happens to be in the Administrative field and here are my promotions since being a warrant: M/Sgt to WOJG, 15 May 1942; WOJG to CWO-2, 16 Nov, 1942; CWO-2 to CWO-3, 30 June 1950.

Now here are two actual cases which were listed on the recent promotion list from W-3 to W-4, and possibly selected due to having a rare specialty: S/Sgt to WOJG, 1948;

WOJG to CWO-2, 1950; CWO-2 to CWO-3, 1951; CWO-3 to CWO-4, 1953. Now, do you call that justice and equality? Absolutely not. It is really discriminatory. What happened to the concept of promotion for honest and faithful service, on which the Warrant Officer was formed back in 1921?

The present selection system for promotional purposes is so outmoded that it compares to the old Army Air Corps officers promotion system in the 30's, when the best captains had to sweat it out for 17 years before getting their major grade.

I'm not bragging, but since being a warrant officer, my duty assignments were not commensurate to 2d Lts.; not to 1st Lts.; not to Captains; but to Majors and Lt. Colonels.

I have only one suggestion, and that is for the planners to check on the Army system, the service that has been in this business for quite sometime.

AN UPSET WARRANT OFFICER

Lo, the Poor Pfc

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It has recently been brought to my attention that the present nine-man infantry squad is composed of seven non-commissioned officers and two private soldiers.

I would suggest that the present TO&E be amended to include within the squad a qualified clinical psychologist to treat the deep feelings of inferiority which those two privates most certainly will develop.

Twining he also served in the South Pacific with the 13th Air Force and subsequently was in command of the 7th Air Force in the Marianas.

The new leadership faces a difficult period in which the hard-won objective of 143 wings will face tough opposition. The Air Force will give them the earnest support they will need.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Heavy bombers of the U. S. Army Air Force attacked important industrial targets in Antwerp late Tuesday afternoon. Weather over the target was clear and good bombing results were observed. Some fighter opposition was encountered and a number of the enemy were destroyed by the bombers. Royal Air Force, U. S. Army Air Force, Dominion and Allied fighters covered the bombers. The fighters had several combats with enemy aircraft, two of which they destroyed. None of the bombers are missing.

50 Years Ago—

As to the relative merits of routes for the isthmian canal—there are seismographs near Panama and at San Jose de Costa Rica in Nicaragua which record automatically the intensity and duration of earth tremors. These records covering a period of 30 months including March of the present year, show that during that time there were 8 tremors at Panama, only two of which were sufficiently strong to be recognized by the natives, while on the Nicaragua route there were 114 tremors of which 55 were light shocks and 21 were strong shocks.

85 Years Ago—

There are no chiefs among the Pacific Indians who have any influence, worth speaking of, over their own tribes and there are none sufficiently representative to be addressed in making a treaty. Hence, our treaties amount to nothing. They are made with one, two, or ten Indians, and it is found afterward that the treaty-makers represent themselves and nobody else.

SecDef Powers Supreme, President Says

Doubts Cast by "Legal Beavers" Resolved by Eisenhower—"He Has My Full Backing"; Takes Command From JCS; Only Six Statutory Restraints Remain

ONE fact that emerges clearly and outstandingly from the reorganization plan announced last week by President Eisenhower is the paramount position given the Secretary of Defense.

It will be recalled that the precise extent of the authority of the Secretary of Defense was one of the problems that worried former Secretary Robert A. Lovett and that he recommended be settled. It was Mr. Lovett's opinion, in which he said he was challenged by certain "legal beavers" and "ardent separatists," that the Secretary's powers were supreme under existing law. He urged in a letter to President Truman last November that the matter be clarified by a "simple directive" by the President. At any rate, he felt that if necessary the law should be changed.

This view was taken, too, by the Rockefeller Committee whose first recommendation was that the Secretary's authority over all agencies of the Department, including the three military departments, be confirmed either by administrative action or change in the law. An appendix to the Committee's report was a legal opinion signed by H. Struve Hensel, counsel for the committee; Roger Kent, Defense Department General Counsel, and Frank X. Brown, Assistant General Counsel, holding that the Secretary's power extends "to all matters arising in the Department of whatsoever kind or nature; that the statute provides that the power and authority of the Secretary are superior to the authorities possessed by any other official, officer or member of the Department."

Now, President Eisenhower in his message to Congress makes it very clear that "no function in any part of the Department of Defense, or in any of its component agencies, should be performed independent of the direction, authority and control of the Secretary of Defense." The Secretary, he declared, is the accountable head of the Department and the principal assistant to the President in all matters relating to the Department—"I want all to know that he has my full backing in that role."

In fact, the only exception mentioned by President Eisenhower in the supreme authority of the Secretary of Defense was in the field of the "legal responsibility of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to advise the President in military matters." Even in his relationship with the JCS, the President very apparently delegated some of his authority to the Secretary of Defense. This comes about in this manner:

In the past, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have designated one of their number to act as the executive agent in a unified command. This military chief then receives reports and issues commands to such unified command and in doing so is responsible to the JCS. For example, in the case of the Far East and the War in Korea, General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army, was designated as the executive agent of the JCS, so that General Mark W. Clark reports to him and receives his orders through him.

Under the new arrangement, now announced by the President, the JCS would not name one of their number, but would leave the matter to the Secretary of Defense. (Please turn to Page 1109)

Sec. Wilson Praises Services

"I was favorably impressed with the morale of our forces in all three Services, and by the leadership of their commanders. It was a matter of real pride and satisfaction for me to see the way in which our soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen are conducting themselves in the performance of a task which is without precedent in world history—the presence of the military forces of one friendly country in the territory of another in times of peace—peace at least in those countries. Our military men abroad must be, each one of them, salesmen of American policy and good will. They recognize this and progress is being made in establishing and maintaining confidence, cooperation and good will between our country and our allies.

"It is good to get out in the field and see there the results of our efforts here at home. It is essential that we physically audit the results of our policies, planning, and expenditures. This is what we have been doing. It cannot be done by more paper work in the Pentagon."—Excerpt from a statement made by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson upon his return this week from a three weeks inspection trip to Europe.

Laos Drive Belies Red Talk Of Peace

RUSSIA'S rare gift for doing things at the wrong time again has provided the outside world with evidence of the hollowness of the "peace offensive." While continuing meaningless assurances of benignity in Europe, and encouraging China's talking against time at Panmunjom, Moscow has at last unmistakably given the go-signal in Southeast Asia. The drive into Laos by Vietminh troops, initiated over a week ago, now is being extended southward toward Cambodia (Peiping's radio officially warned the "imperialists" in Cambodia last Tuesday) and also toward Thailand where even Peiping has not discerned imperialism. The Chinese war on Indo-China, in brief, has been fully exposed as merely a part of the revived Red offensive against Southeast Asia as a whole, and the "world peace" gabble from Moscow as totally fraudulent.

It is gratifying to observe that the fraud was discerned in advance of the Laos operation. First-hand reports to the White House and to Congressional committees in the past few days, from Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, and General Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, on their return from Europe, explicitly stated that the entire NATO Council, not only the defense authorities but "the foreign ministers and finance ministers as well" were unanimously skeptical of Moscow and unanimously opposed to any lessening of NATO effort.

DETAILED REPORTS from the recent NATO meetings in Paris add to earlier conviction that good was accomplished. We will hear more of this on 20 May and thereafter, when General Ridgway is scheduled to appear before the Foreign Affairs and Military Affairs committees of both Houses of Congress, and explain in detail the importance of continuing at a steady pace the work thus far done. It is important for many reasons, one of which has escaped general attention—namely that a steady pace and continued mutual confidence are essential until August, certainly, when the one-year study of new weapons and the tactics and strategy they call for will have been completed.

This is a study which General Ridgway initiated last summer, setting aside enough time to make it a serious enterprise—and of greater significance by reason of the recent decision to supply our allies with information on the tactical use of atomic weapons, as indicated by our several tests at the Nevada Proving Grounds. Instruction in this new realm of warfare, provided at our special school in West Germany, is bound to affect the year-long study appreciably, and the study itself is bound to affect political-military discussions at the NATO Council meeting in October.

The manifest desirability of keeping NATO activities on a steady basis, at least until then, we can expect General Ridgway to point out to his congressional audiences. The recent Council meeting pointed out the way which NATO hopes to follow in 1954; the coming study, if there is no untimely upset of plans, could help point out the path for years to come. General Gruenther lately gave the Capitol more than a hint of how atomic weapons can affect the whole basic concept of western strategy; his chief may be able to go much further.

ON WESTERN DEFENSE in general it is gratifying to find confirmation of early reports on the unanimity of NATO views. Full agreement on the fraudulence of Russian peace overtures has been fully reported in newspaper dispatches. But also there was remarkable unanimity on the subject-matter of the annual review, with America's colleagues gravely agreeing that America's performance has been all that could reasonably be expected. Also on the Ridgway thesis that qualitative improvement of such forces as are pledged to NATO is more important than the exact extent of quantitative increase. Also on the interesting suggestion that nothing be stated publicly about the exact increase contemplated—with the deliberate purpose of testing out the security attitudes of 14 powers, in order to find out which one first divulges this important secret; we, among others, are still waiting, and willing to keep on waiting, indefinitely.

THE BLUNT REMARK of Secretary Dulles, that it is the European allies which now must set the pace, at first seemed to irritate the Europeans; the purpose, one learns indirectly, was the opposite, in an effort to put an end to the old technique of European party oppositionists, who make trouble by sneering "So! America orders us to provide 'steen divisions, eh?" Maybe it was effective. It must be recognized that we have a continuingly difficult task of inspiring and urging and yet mollifying, all at the same time. We must see that the pace is steady and as fast as steadiness permits, but there is a great art in knowing when to haul and when to push and when just to go alongside. It is the art of political leadership, and it is vital that we excel in it.

THE SOLIDARITY OF NATO, as exhibited at the Council, is timely and necessary, and nobody knows it better than the Americans who made the trip to Europe. Their journey was made partly for the purpose of providing information to colleagues and partly for the purpose, in the case of the new secretaries, of acquiring information not only about NATO but about the American elements across the Atlantic. Thus, Mr. Wilson spoke with satisfaction of his visits to American installations in Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Italy and North Africa, and his two days with the Mediterranean Fleet. At one stage or another he was accompanied by Secretary of the Army Stevens, Secretary of the Navy Anderson, and Assistant Secretary of Defense Frank Nash, as well as General Bradley. At his subsequent joint committee hearing Mr. Wilson remarked that a physical audit of "the results of our policies, planning, and expenditures . . . cannot be done by mere paper work in the Pentagon." It may be that the new executives spent sufficient time overseas to acquire advance information on what may be expected from the implementing of certain new "policies, planning and expenditures" which are presently under consideration.

THE RETURN of the Defense personnel, in the trail of the Secretary of State and the Mutual Security Administrator, was timed to coincide with the start of foreign aid discussions in Congress. The official utterances came almost at the same time as President Eisenhower's message requesting $5,828 million in new funds for the various categories of foreign aid, and clearly were intended to help make the case for this considerable amount without any delay. The request lops $1,772 million from the Truman estimate of last January, but nobody can fail to recognize

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Raise Roles and Missions Issue—Although carefully avoiding a direct recommendation for reexamination of the roles and missions assigned to each of the Armed Forces at the Key West, Fla., and Newport, R. I., meetings in 1948, the Rockefeller Committee report on defense organization pointedly suggests the need for a new study of the controversial subject.

The Committee, in listing what it called "compelling objectives," includes as the second of four goals the statement that "the Secretary of Defense must be able to clarify the roles and missions of the Services."

Further along in its report—the text of which was published in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL—the Committee observes that proposals have been made to create a single Chief of Staff or a single General Staff, or to give the present JCS Chairman authority to vote or settle disagreements.

"These proposals," says the Committee, "are advanced particularly by those who believe that the present definition of the roles and missions of the services lacks clarity and invited competition among them."

The Committee recommended, and so did President Eisenhower, that the Key West agreement, be modified in one major respect to remove command function from the JCS in order to enable its members to work more effectively as a unified planning body.

A recommendation was not made explicitly, although it was stated implicitly in the Rockefeller report, that the roles and missions agreement at Key West and Newport should be reviewed.

It is recalled that just prior to leaving office in January, then Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter contended publicly that such a reexamination was necessary.

There is little question but that the heart of the matter relates to the Navy's plans for construction of 10 or 12 flush-deck carriers. Funds for a third of these carriers (cost $215,000,000) are included in the defense budget for fiscal '54 as sent to Capitol Hill in January.

Undoubtedly, whether or not to provide funds for construction of this vessel will be a heated issue in the next few months in the Appropriations Committees and on the floor of the House and Senate.

What is likely if Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson does not direct a new study of roles and missions, is a Congressional examination of the problem. With the Rockefeller report as a supporting document, Congressional leaders may well call upon Defense Department authorities, particularly members of the JCS, to answer questions concerning the validity, five years later, of the roles and missions accord which was reached in 1948 at conferences deliberately held hundreds of miles away from the Pentagon.

Army Association Merger—The current issue of the Combat Forces Journal, publication of the Association of the U. S. Army, which is an integration of the U. S. Infantry Association and U. S. Field Artillery Association, reports that the U. S. Antiaircraft Association has voted to merge by a vote of about nine to one.

The Combat Forces Journal says that "a single strong Association can far better represent the interest of the combat divisions, regiments, battalions, companies and platoons and the different combat troops among them than a number of separate branch associations can. We only need to look, for example, at the capable and notable work done for the U. S. Marine Corps by the Marine Corps Association, and comparable associations in other services."

Says the Combat Forces Journal: "Today the Marine Corps Association boasts nearly 75,000 members—many more than our Army Association—and more power to them in their constant full support to a fighting combat corps."

Navy Makes Tars Out of Cads—Since the first day it was founded, the Navy has been peopled by "tars." The New Military and Naval Dictionary says "tar" is a slang term for sailor. But now, the Navy has made it official.

A large group of officers, previously known as "CAD's," have been converted into "TAR's" by the Bureau of Naval Personnel. CAD's were Naval Reserve officers on Continuous Active Duty "in connection with the training and administration of the Naval Reserve Program." Henceforth, the Bureau has declared, "such personnel shall be referred to as 'TAR's' (Training-Administration Reserves)."

New Efficiency Report Plan—The Defense Department said this week that new efficiency report procedures for officers assigned to the Office of the Secretary of Defense are shaping up, but have not yet been ordered into practice.

The new plan was revealed last week by President Eisenhower who said he has given approval to SecDef Wilson to revise the present method used to prepare and sign efficiency reports for military personnel who serve full time in OSD. The President said instructions also will be issued "to guide selection boards in their operations."

At present, Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers serving in OSD under a civilian chief are not, in some instances, provided with formal fitness reports. Civilians, in many cases, sign blank fitness reports and attach a letter-statement regarding the caliber of the officers' work. In other instances, the civilian head fills out the fitness report and leaves the signature to a higher military officer in some other section.

Under the new plan, according to the President, the civilian official will be responsible both for filling out the form and signing it, and "no other efficiency reports for such service will be maintained." This move, President Eisenhower said, is "aimed at giving full credit to military officers serving in the Office of the Secretary of Defense for their work for the Department of Defense as a whole."

The Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force will be instructed, as a result of the new plan, to direct their selection boards "to give the same weight to service" in OSD "and the efficiency reports from that Office as to service in the military department staff and to efficiency reports of departmental officers."

Wave Secretary To President—Helen E. Weaver, USN, secretary to President Eisenhower, was nominated this week for appointment as a permanent chief ship's clerk—one of the most coveted warrant officer grades in the Navy. The Wave warrant officer, by virtue of her new rank, will rate all of the honors and ceremonies which are accorded to fully commissioned officers. She previously was serving as a Chief Yeoman.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...The Defense Dept., which has drastically curtailed its mailing of speeches and PRESS RELEASES to newspapers in order to save money, has sent the text of DepSecDef Kyes' Chamber of Commerce speech (The Journal, 2 May) in a special mailing to hundreds of influential alumni of the Joint Civilian Orientation Conferences. The speech, STRONGLY CRITICAL of past military leadership, was described by the JOCO office as "the first major statement to be issued from the Office of the Secretary of Defense since the change in administration."

...The Air Force, in the continued absence of its own Academy, is banking heavily on the AFROTC PROGRAM, ultimately expected to produce more than 80% of all new 2d Lts. An all-out campaign is under way in the 209 campus units to boost FLYING TRAINING applications. Last year only about 1 out of 8 AFROTC graduates wanted to fly; this year, it's about 1 out of 3.

...There's apt to be fireworks at the next General Conference of the NATL. GUARD ASSN. at San Diego 19-22 Oct. Guard leaders are unhappy with current manpower policies. The upcoming Conference will be a special one in any event. It's a DIAMOND JUBILEE session.

...If the Administration and Congress cut military strength by the scores of thousands, the Services may be forced in some instances to resort to FORCED ATTRITION in officer ranks, probably by increased selectivity in accepting new category extension applications. Meantime, the Pentagon-Bureau of the budget hassle over CONTRACT TOURS remains unsettled. Reservists are bitter over the long delay and the apparent BoB REFUSAL to go along with Congressional intent.

...It's a good bet that deactivation of the 5th Infantry Training Div. at Indiantown Gap, Pa., will be followed by ADDITIONAL SHUTDOWNS of training facilities. One report this week was that at least three ARMY CAMPS will be closed in fiscal '54.

...Powerful members of the House Appropriations Committee this week raised during CLOSED SESSION budget testimony stern questions concerning the Defense Dept.'s request to let the restrictive Van Zandt CAREER RETIREMENT amendment die on 1 July. A strong effort likely will be made to continue the controversial rider in fiscal '54, notwithstanding the fact that its ORIGINAL SPONSOR, Rep. Van Zandt, says it is no longer needed and should be rescinded.

...The cart apparently got before the horse en route from the Pentagon to the WHITE HOUSE last week. Normally, the recommendations of a top-level Commission are MADE PUBLIC before the implementing action. But it was the other way around with the ROCKEFELLER COMMITTEE report. It was withheld for a full 24 hours after the President disclosed his Defense Reorganization Plan, based on the Rockefeller report, which, incidentally, was dated 11 April.

AF Retirement Policy Change?—There was immediate speculation this week with announcement of the appointment of General Nathan F. Twining to succeed General Hoyt S. Vandenberg as Air Force Chief of Staff there may be a change in Air Force policy pertaining to retirement of permanent major generals with 5 years in grade and 35 years' service.

The Air Force has been retiring such officers when they reach 35 and 5 and some officers have gone out below the age of 55.

General Twining himself would have been retired in October at age 56 after 35 and 5.

Last week, President Eisenhower said he wanted the Pentagon to look into the situation requiring early retirement of general officers willing to continue in service.

IN FUND DRIVE. The Women's Army and Navy League is sponsoring a "Phantom Concert" to raise funds for the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club which they operate. Shown here are, left to right: Mrs. Anthony McAuliffe, wife of Lieutenant General McAuliffe, USA; Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Honorary President; Mrs. Claude B. Mickelwait, wife of Brigadier General Mickelwait, USA, and president of the League; Mrs. W. P. T. Hill, wife of Major General Hill, USMC; and Mrs. Maurice S. Dillingham, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Dillingham, USAF.

"Phantom Concert" To Raise Real $ To Carry on Club for Servicemen

The Woman's Army and Navy League, of which Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower is Honorary President, is launching its major fund-raising benefit for the year: a Phantom Concert (make-believe concert) to take place on or about Armed Forces Day, 16 May. The purpose is to raise money for the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club in Washington which the League sponsors.

Thousands of invitations to subscribe to the concert at the rate of $2.00 a ticket (real money) are being sent all over the world and the League anticipates a big response. The League hopes to make the Phantom Concert an annual affair so that the term "Phantom Concert" will become associated with the Woman's Army and Navy League as a fund-raising project.

The Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club (the home away from home for servicemen) is operated and maintained by the Woman's Army and Navy League for servicemen from all over the country. It has been located at 1015 L Street, N.W., since 1923. Manned by volunteers from the Woman's Army and Navy League, the club provides recreation, lodging and excellent meals for servicemen at very low cost. Last year 26,934 men were lodged at the club and 27,564 meals were served.

The League was first organized in 1872 by a small group of wives of officers of the Armed Forces. Today its membership runs into thousands and is spread out all over the world. It maintains the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club on funds raised through membership dues, donations, benefits, and dedications, and in the future the League hopes to make the Phantom Concert its major fund-raising project each year.

Hart, CG of Fleet Marine Forces in the Pacific, and Brig. Gen. James P. Riseley, who commands the 1st Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force, FMF.

■ NAVY SUPPLY DEPOT, PHILADELPHIA. The Officers' Wives Club of the Aviation Supply Office-Naval Aviation Supply Depot-General Stores Supply Office, Philadelphia, staged one of the major social events of the season on 25 April. They presented "Love That Compound," a musical extravaganza in four acts, as a fund-raising affair for both the Navy Relief Society and the club's annual Christmas party for the Station's children.

Credit for writing the show was given to Marilyn Arnold, daughter of Rear Adm. Ralph J. Arnold, CO of ASO-NASD, and Mrs. Arnold; Cdr. James Wolfe and Cdr. Richard Jones. But, said Mrs. H. H. Blackman, President of the Wives' Club, "every member of the cast contributed material."

Entertainment between acts was supplied by a vocal quartette which included Mrs. Blackman, Marilyn Arnold, Cdr. James Parker and LCdr. George Redding. Leonard MacClain, organist, contributed musical accompaniment for the show.

Another feature of the gala evening—starting at 7 p.m. in the Commissioned Officers' Mess aboard the station—was a savory dinner which was cooked and served by a committee of officers' wives under the direction of Mrs. William Nielsen and Mrs. James Parker.

Mrs. Robert Darlington, chairman of decorations, and her committee used bright murals, backdrops, and small cafe tables to give the club the air of a gay-colored and lively cabaret. The musical, which had a cast of 35 officers and wives, was followed by dancing in the main ballroom.

Other members of the committee, headed by Cdr. William Nielsen, were Cdr. H. H. Blackman, finance chairman, and LCdr. James Alexander, publicity.

■ CARSWELL AFB, TEX. "April in Paris" was the theme of the luncheon and style show recently held by the Officers' Wives' Club, Ft. Worth, Tex. Hostesses for this meeting were the wives of the Seventh Bomb Wing with Mrs. George T. Chadwell as general chairman.

A live French poodle, a sidewalk cafe banked by an art gallery of Lautrec's paintings and iron carls filled with flowers created a real Parisian atmosphere. A "French maid" presented each of the 400 members attending a vial of perfume.

Each of the five large tables was individually decorated and carried out the "April in Paris" theme to a minute detail. A travel setting was featured at one table—this had model airliners, a miniature Eiffel Tower and travel folders. French foods were the highlight of another table—there were authentic French menus, French cookbooks, miniature French chefs, cooking utensils and even fresh French salads. The Fashion table was patterned after a real French Fabric House—Dolls wore "creations" from leading French couturiers. Dolls in artist costumes and miniature easels with copies of French paintings were the focal points of interest on the Art table. The actual musical score of "April in Paris" extended the full length of another large table, which had on it many tiny golden musical instruments.

The eight models as well as the commentator, Mrs. C. C. Brittan were all members of the Carswell OWC. Mr. Jimmy Livingston, local television star, furnished the background music.

fense, who would in turn designate one of the Departments, in this case undoubtedly the Department of the Army. The chain of command would then be from General Clark to General Collins, to Secretary of the Army Stevens, and thence to Secretary Wilson, thus relieving the JCS of its command functions.

The Rockefeller report, in recommending this procedure, pointed out that in designating such agencies, the Secretary would be acting for the President and would need to consult with him. Even in this respect, Mr. Eisenhower made it clear he would leave such matters to Mr. Wilson for he said that the new orders revising the Key West agreement in this respect are being issued "with my approval."

To cope with the exigencies of the military situation, however, President Eisenhower specified that the military chief of the designated agencies would be empowered to act directly in the name of the Secretary of Defense. He said:

"It is understood, however, that, for the strategic direction and operational control of forces, and for the conduct of combat operations, the military chief of the designated military department will be authorized by the Secretary of Defense to receive and transmit reports and orders and to act for that Department in its executive agency capacity. This arrangement will make it always possible to deal promptly with emergency or wartime situations. The military chief will clearly be acting in the name and by the direction of the Secretary of Defense. Promulgated orders will directly state that fact."

Thus Mr. Wilson will be virtually supreme in the field of defense. He will have nine assistant secretaries to act as a staff for him, coordinating the work of the three departments and checking up on their work in the field. Nevertheless, while the center of power, Mr. Wilson is expected by the President to depend largely upon the Secretaries of the three military departments, for the Chief Executive said: "I am impressed with the determination of the Secretary of Defense . . . to look to the Secretaries of the three military departments as his principal agents for the management and direction of the entire defense enterprise."

The new General Counsel, who will rank virtually as an assistant secretary, will be in a position to see that there is no longer any conflict of legal opinions that might cast doubt, as in the past, on the broad authority of the Secretary of Defense. One of the reasons for promoting him was cited by the President as the "importance of authoritative legal opinions and interpretations." In fact, the Rockefeller report, whose recommendations the President followed in this, as in most other respects, went as far as to say the opinions of the General Counsel, when approved by the Secretary, "should be followed throughout the entire department." Furthermore, the report said that the new General Counsel "should set up close relations with the chief legal officers in the three military departments, so that the legal work of the entire Department of Defense may that there is strong Congressional disposition to make a deeper cut, particularly out of the portion intended for Europe. A forecast would be that the President will have to exert his well known powers of leadership to prevent serious excisions from the program. Informative analysis of the program is difficult at this stage, so general are the terms by which the separate items are described. Some very useful observations can be expected later in the month for General Matthew B. Ridgway, expected to testify here about 20 May.

INCREASED FAR EAST AID, however, is sought by the President and probably agreeable to the Congress, if legislators' expressions are indicative. For this, again, Moscow's action (at our budget time, of all seasons) is responsible, for one considerable item in the list is the $400 million destined for Indo-China. There must be those who wish that so considerable addition to past aid in the Far East had come a bit earlier, for it is not possible to translate money in a budget request overnight into field equipment 10,000 miles away, where it is greatly needed today.

THE GRAVITY of the military prospect in that area has increased during the week. The attacking elements are much closer to their objectives and appear to have added to their strength. The original Vietminh forces are clearly aided by 12,000 Chinese. The southward move toward Thailand is unmistakable, and the threat to Cambodia, as well, now is plainly announced instead of being merely implied. There remains the possibility that the French-Union forces will be able to attack the Vietminh column's greatly exposed left flank and rear, but at this writing there is no evidence that such an operation is in prospect. Unless there is early corrective action, there is a fair likelihood of foreign aid getting there too late.

ALLIED TRADE with Red nations came to attention once more this week, provoking an impressive declaration by Secretary of State Dulles. It marked off a clear difference between the administration and "those who would sharply raise our tariff"; also "those who would sharply cut foreign aid"; also "those who would seek to impose upon our friends and allies additional restriction upon their trade with the Communist world even in terms of non-strategic articles." While Mr. Dulles tactfully refrained from naming any senators conspicuously in all three categories, he left no doubt of the administration's view that this country will not advance its leadership by bearing down upon allies who make no secret of their continuing trade with Red nations. The importance of the utterance cannot be overlooked, partly because of the pointed manner in which the State Department opposes some of the extremists in the Senate, partly because of its recognition that the economic as well as the military needs of allies are recognized in this public manner, in an area about which there has been a great deal of loose public talk.

be supervised and coordinated effectively."

There is little doubt but that this function of coordinating and supervising functions in the three departments will also extend to the other Assistant Secretaries. For example, the Assistant Secretary for Health and Medicine will probably have general charge of the Surgeons General and the medical services of the three Services. The same will apply to the Assistant Secretaries for Properties and Installations, Supply and Logistics, Applications Engineering, Research and Development, etc.

Thus with the full approval of the President and legal control through his own General Counsel, Secretary Wilson's word on matters of defense and the administration of the Department will be final. The legal opinion included in the Rockefeller report mentioned only six limitations on his power as specified in the law. They are:

1. The Secretary of Defense may not exercise his power so as to transfer, reassign, abolish, or consolidate the combatant functions of the military services.
2. The Secretary may not indirectly accomplish the above by either detailing or assigning personnel, or directing the expenditure of funds.
3. The Secretary cannot merge the three military departments or deprive the Secretaries of those departments of their legal right to administer their organizations, subject to his power and authority.
4. He cannot use his legal power to establish a single commander of all the Armed Forces; an operating military supreme command over the Armed Forces; or a supreme Armed Forces general staff.
5. He may not transfer, reassign, abolish, or consolidate a specific function assigned by the National Security Act, or some other law to another officer or organizational segment of the Department, unless he first reports his intended action to the Armed Services Committees of the Congress. It should be noted that only a report, not prior approval, is required.
6. Nothing in the statute should be construed: "to prevent a Secretary of a military department or a member of the JCS from presenting to the Congress, on his own initiative, after first informing the Secretary of Defense, any recommendation relating to the Department of Defense that he may deem proper." The opinion points out that this provision "is not really a limitation on the power of the Secretary of Defense."

Decorate Mr. Thacker, Senior USMC Historian

Joel Davis Thacker, senior historian and archivist of the Marine Corps, received the Navy Department's Distinguished Civilian Service Award yesterday, 8 May, from Under Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas.

The ceremony, held in Mr. Thomas's office, was attended by General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps.

For more than 20 years Mr. Thacker has been the man at Marine Corps Headquarters who could answer—with hardly a moment's hesitation—such questions as, What color were Marine Corps uniforms in 1812? or How many "Leathernecks" fought at Soissons? or What did a famed Marine Corps Commandant say when he shut up his office and went off to fight the Indians?

Mr. Thacker has served under four successive Commandants.

His citation for the DCSA, the highest award bestowed for civilian service, reads:

"For distinguished service to the Department of the Navy while serving as principal adviser on historical matters to the Commandant of the Marine Corps, members of his staff and heads of historical activities of Headquarters Marine Corps during the past eight years.

"By his devotion to duty, unusual ability and sacrifice of personal time, Mr. Thacker contributed materially to the unprecedented expansion of the Marine Corps historical program. Records of events and accomplishments of the Corps written by Mr. Thacker for dissemination to the public, press, radio, information bureaus, speakers and nationwide historical exhibits, were outstanding.

"His foresight in the preservation of Marine Corps historical records for posterity warrants the highest praise."

Mr. Thacker participated in five major battles of World War I, and returned from France with a Silver Star, a Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster and a French Fourragere. He spent the next year in hospitals recovering from his wounds.

Mr. Thacker lives at 1 Whittier Street, NW, Washington, D. C., with his wife, Bula, and their daughter, Joan.

Air Profits Low

Airframe manufacturers boosted their 1952 sales 88.5 per cent over the previous year, but their net earnings of $81.7 million represented only a 2.2 per cent margin on sales, as compared with a 5.4 per cent margin for 1951 manufacturing concerns surveyed by the National City Bank of New York.

The airframe manufacturers' survey was made by the Aircraft Industries Association which based its figures on data supplied by 12 major airframe companies responsible for over 90 per cent of the airframe weight produced in 1952.

Backlogs reported at the end of 1952 totalled approximately $11-billion as compared to $8.5 billion at the close of the previous fiscal year. In view of this, the AIA said, "it is obvious that the full impact on sales of the post-Korea procurement program has yet to be felt. Barring drastic stretchouts, or cut-backs, 1953 and 1954 should see the peak of the present production climb."

 "It is believed that the present military power can be greatly increased with less money.
 "The unpaid bills left by the Truman Administration make reduction in 1954 expenditure extremely difficult. Any further savings which may appear possible, either to the Administration or to the Committee in the course of its consideration of 1954 requests will, of course, be taken into consideration.
 "The world situation demands not only a powerful National defense but a sound and strong National economy."

Truman.

Since the March press conference, however, Mr. Wilson has had influential advice from civilian and military leaders on the need to increase the attractiveness of military careers. He now is said to be considering a switch in his position.

The Strauss Commission on Incentive Pay, whose chairman, Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, USNR, inactive, is now a White House advisor, advocated a plan whereby base pay would be related to the cost-of-living index.

Only last week, President Eisenhower directed the Defense Department to investigate the problems "of attracting and holding competent career personnel."

Defense leaders are in virtually unanimous agreement that the lag in military pay is a major deterrent to attractiveness of careers in uniform.

The Rockefeller Commission, whose report the President followed very closely in his Defense Reorganization Plan, stated in its conclusion that "it was, on several occasions, brought to our attention that the inducements and rewards of the civilian and military career services may not have kept pace with the attractions of private enterprise."

Mr. Wilson is known to have great respect for the opinions and advice of the members of the Strauss Commission and the Rockefeller Commission. Both reports were unanimous.

One of the members of the Strauss Commission, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president emeritus of Brookings Institution, was named, subsequently, by Mr. Wilson as Chairman of the Dependents Care Commission.

The only full-time member of the Rockefeller Commission who is a military officer is General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. All of the other members are civilians, including Mr. Lovett and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, president of Penn State College and the President's brother.

All of the members of the Strauss Commission were civilians.

The advice of these impartial citizens that steps must be taken to make military careers more attractive is said to have influenced Mr. Wilson to such an extent that he now feels it necessary to reexamine carefully the pay raise proposal.

Service personnel and their families would be well advised to keep their hopes in check, particularly in view of the strong economy drive, but at least they now know that the Pentagon has not yet scuttled a pay raise.

New Wing at Clovis AFB

Activation of the 37th Fighter Bomber Wing at Clovis AFB, N. M., and its assignment to Tactical Air Command's Ninth Air Force, was announced this week by General John K. Cannon, TAC commander.

The new wing, which joins the 50th Fighter Bomber Wing at Clovis, will be trained in the tactical air mission of providing effective air power for use in conjunction with surface forces.

This training includes providing air cover for ground and amphibious forces; interdiction or the air attack of enemy rail lines, motor vehicles and supplies to the rear of the battle lines, and the augmentation of the striking power of strategic air forces.

To Command First ND

Rear Adm. Charles B. Momsen has been ordered as Commandant of the First Naval District in Boston, relieving Rear Adm. John L. McCrea. Admiral McCrea, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL, will be retired on 1 June.

Admiral Momsen was formerly Commander, Submarine Force Pacific. He will be succeeded in that command by Rear Adm. George L. Russell, Commander of Cruiser Division Four and former Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

The Navy said the transfer of Admirals Russell and Momsen will take place early in May and Admiral Momsen will relieve Admiral McCrea on 1 June.

Senate Group Reports Bill For Air Research Facilities

The Senate Armed Services Committee recommended this week that the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics be authorized to spend $4.5 million for the construction of additional aeronautical research facilities.

Under the plan, the NACA would be empowered to obtain the necessary land and technical facilities required to carry out its research program during the coming fiscal year.

The Committee was assured by the director of the NACA that the contemplated construction does not duplicate existing facilities available elsewhere, and that the proposed projects have been closely coordinated with other aeronautical programs.

The measure provides for:

(1) The installation at Langley Aeronautical Laboratory, Hampton, Va., of a boundary-layer control system which would increase the useful speed range of the 8-foot transonic tunnel to include the maximum speeds of existing supersonic tunnels, and would permit research on critical problems in the upper transonic speed range. Also, the installation of a 20-inch variable Mach number facility for the study of high-speed missiles above Mach number 3.5, and the enlargement of the Stratton Road substation which would permit more effective operation of the newly completed research facilities at the laboratory.

(2) The purchase of a non-scaling pre-flight jet heat accumulator at Wallops Island, Va., to replace the present heat accumulator which has scaled and corroded.

(3) Modernization of the supersonic tunnel at Ames Aeronautical Laboratory, Moffett Field, Calif.

(4) The purchase of 10 acres of land adjacent to the Lewis Flight Propulsion Laboratory, Cleveland, O.
